

LeQun Lee Huang, Ph.D.

Dr. Huang is the Director of Pharmaceutical Research Institute and Professor of Nanjing University, China. He received a B.S. from the Nanjing University in 1982 and the Ph.D. from the Iowa State University in 1987. After his over 15 years outstanding biomedical research career at Yale and Bayer Co. in USA, Dr. Huang returned to China as the associate Dean and the professor of the Medical School, Nanjing University in 2005.

Dr. Huang is a well established and well known expert in biomedical research and industry. Dr. Huang has major contributions to both pharmacology and mass spectrometry. He was the pioneer to introduce several new methods for analysis of biologicals based on mass spectrometry. His academia experiences and accomplishments are evidenced by more than 30 peer-reviewed articles, over 50 abstracts, grants, patents and many rewards.